O my heart, did you not promise me that if I repented from the love of Layla, you too would repent?
Now I have turned away from loving Layla, but why is it that whenever her name is mentioned, you melt away.

A soul longs for the one with beautiful eyes It lays all of its wounds before them My eyelids lament the tears that drench and burn them Your shadow does not merely enter the ocean of tears, but swims within it.

anchor upon eyes so clear and bright Without you, my eyes would never drown in tears of longing, tears that fall in torrents, never cradled by the embrace of sleep.

Truly, the breeze of basil and sweet fragrance has awakened my longing I passed the night with the scent of aloeswood, burned for me through the openings of the incense burner Indeed, love is nothing but a trial, and a complaint dwelling in the heart When sorrow tightens upon me, I draw a long breath, until it weakens the ribs within my chest.
